MESSAGE

With its 1.3 billion population and a rich culinary history, India is among the biggest food markets globally. The scale of its diversity and size gives India a robust platform to sustain a world class food industry, an industry which not only caters to domestic demand but also creates an impact globally.

In a world where most, if not all, industries are ever evolving through technical innovations in their entire value chain, Regulations also need to evolve to remain relevant. Along with Regulations, compliance is a tool rather than hindrance for winning the game. The right regulation and compliance help boost both demand and supply, benefiting the entire value chain. This is even more true for food business because of food's direct impact on health and nourishment of the society.

Food business operators in India have been struggling under the cobweb of multiple regulations implemented by different Governmental agencies. The entire food value chain is looking at a great opportunity after the Food Safety and Standards Act, 2006 and the Regulations there-under, implemented during August, 2011. This opens a new path where regulations and compliances with right reforms can help actualize the potential of multi decade growth in the entire food value chain.

Founded in 1945 Oil Technologists Association of India (OTAI) is a premier, not for profit organization of scientists, academicians, researchers, quality service providers and industrialists working in oil seeds, oils, fats, oleochemicals, surfactants and allied products. FSSAI is the apex regulatory authority in the food sector established to lay down science based standards to ensure availability of safe and wholesome food for human consumption.

With the intend of creating a framework for ease of doing business, for the first time in India, OTAI and FSSAI have come together on a common platform to discuss and identify the challenges and explore possible way forwards for creating an effective, evolving set of Regulations in harmony with global best practices.

This is a unique opportunity for the whole spectrum of Food Business Operators and I welcome all of you to this mega event.

MESSAGE

I am happy to learn that Oil Technologists Association of India (OTAI) is organising an international conference on 'Compliance across Food Value Chain - Challenges and Future Road Map' during 30 - 31 October, 2017 in New Delhi.

FSSAI is trying to promote the culture of food safety in the country. Food safety needs to be viewed as not merely a statutory obligation but as a shared responsibility to safeguard the health and wellbeing of the consumers. All stakeholders in the food sector would benefit through forging of partnerships based on mutual trust that promote adherence to safety and quality requirements. The food sector is poised for exponential growth. However, only those food businesses that take care to build their brand equity and credibility and gain the trust of the consumers by adherence to safety and quality standards would be able to take advantage of these growth prospects.

I am pleased to learn that OTAI has taken up the challenge of identifying areas of weakness existing in the industry so that these can be addressed in a focussed manner. I also hope that the conference will suggest the best way forward to plug the gaps in compliance so as to create a win-win situation for the industry, consumers and the regulatory authorities.

I extend my best wishes for the success of the conference.

(Ashish Bahuguna)

Message

Global food imports pegged at 8.35% of the global merchandise imports, or US$1376 billion, speaks the opportunity the sector holds for India especially being one of the largest food producers in the world. India has been progressing well in the global supply of food and food products and India exports 11.9% or US$31.4 billion worth of food out of its total merchandise exports.

The total food production in India is likely to grow manifold in the years to come and so will grow the opportunity for investments in food and food processing technologies, skills and equipment, especially in the areas of canning, dairy, food processing, packaging, infrastructure etc.

With the growing global awareness on safety and security of human, animal and plant health the number of non-tariff measures - sanitary and phyto sanitary and also technical barriers to trade, are growing in large numbers every month. Compliance is thus becoming a major challenge for the Indian food industry for accessing the global market.

FIEO is happy to co-organise this International Conference on Compliance in India across Food Value Chain – Challenges and Future Road Map and as the India partner of the Enterprise Europe Network extends its support to the food industry in terms of internationalisation of the companies, sourcing technology, identifying business partners, identifying research & development opportunities etc.

I am sure the conference and exhibition will bring together the stake holders to discuss, deliberate, identify the challenges and also learn to meet the growing global compliance requirements.
